

What's Growing On...

August 2008

Town or Country, create your own personal paradise with pottery

Start with the basics: Define the boundaries of the space and the mood you want to promote. Think about colors and styles that correlate to that mood and then make sure all the plants and pottery you pick go along with that theme. Whether it is to create a gathering place for friends, an informal place to have business meetings or a retreat to get away from it all, container gardening can create the atmosphere you want.

Top 5 reasons why anyone can plant a container garden

5. Plants in pots can be moved without the risk of transplant shock.

4. Pots come in many shapes, colors and sizes to fit any budget and style!

3. Take advantage of Miramar's pottery coupon this month!

2. Plants in pots can be moved around more easily, making last minute layout decisions easier to manage.

1. You don't need a large space to put a container garden. Most spaces will work, from a small patio to a large commercial landscape.

Solanum jasminoides. This beautiful evergreen vine never seems to stop producing its white star-shaped flower clusters. It has a rapid growth rate of up to 30 feet, which makes this vine common on arbors for adding some overhead shade. This showy vine can be cut back any time of year to prevent tangling and promote growth, and can be grown in full sun or partial shade.

San Diego's Landscape Center is undergoing a major reconstruction!

Over the next month, the San Diego Landscape office is getting a face lift and will be under construction. There will be a smooth transition during this time while operating out of the adjacent sales office. Business will operate as usual with all fertilizers, tools, pottery, soils and other amendments for sale. After the building is finished, look for a new store front, heating and air conditioning and a more inviting layout!
